WEDNESDAY EVENING, AUG. 9, 1934.

WILL BE NO SETTLEMENT.

There will be no settlement of the coal strike as a result of the Cleveland conference called by President Lewis of the miners' union. There will be an agreement reached with some of the operators in the Central Competitive field which is a part of the strategy Lewis has planned as his "last trick" in an effort to force a national agreement.

This agreement will very probably embody all the demands the miners have made and it will be proclaimed as a "settlement." But it will not be a settlement. It will merely mean an opportunity to continue the struggle for union domination of labor in the coal industry.

With finances strengthened by a restoration of the "check off" in the fields which will be found willing to accept Lewis' terms, the union will be in a better position than at present to continue an aggressive campaign in the non-union and the partially unionized districts, it being a part of the plan of the so-called settlement to continue the strike in all districts which refuse to come under the terms of the agreement to be negotiated at Cleveland.

If this is the outcome of the conference, as seems highly probable, it means that the Conneltsville region and neighboring fields will witness a prolongation of the fight waged since April 1, and that it will be conducted with renewed vigor. It is, therefore, wholly beside the mark to apply the term "settlement" to the agreement to be reached at Cleveland.

The Womans Act is beginning to cause wonder and amazement among some persons who previously believed it to be toothless.

Members of Congress have less than one more week of vacation as against almost four by the school children. But some Congressmen have more need for instruction than some school children.

The "settlement" in prospect at Cleveland will very likely unsettle the coal situation still more.

Watch your step or the K. K. K. may trip you up.

The coal strike seems to have advanced to the "final saving" stage, which means that any settlement that can be negotiated will be acclaimed a great victory.

VACATION.

The boys are on their holidays.
As draws as berries they are burned.
But grown-up men on duty stay.
Still finding lessons to be learned.
Youth romps the vacant lots in play.
From books and studies wholly free.
But age must grow from day to day.
Still seeking manhood's high degree.
Youth puts its lesson grim aside,
But age must meet a sternest test.
With man life's never-ending ride.
He must do better than the best.
That while the children romp and play
And from the path of duty stray,
Age never puts life's work away.
Each page has lessons it must learn.
No find vacation ever draws.
When age has come and youth has fled,
Old feet up! upon the steepest ledge.
To tread the road which lies ahead.
So let them think their lessons done.
They will discover down the way
The work of man is just begun.
They shall find when they are old
That in the highway is a stony road.
How few of us have known
How much there is to learn.

Another Attempt To Blow Up Bridge

Another unsuccessful attempt was made to dynamite a bridge on the Brown Run branch of the Monongahela railroad, near Lockport, Tuesday night, strikers or their sympathizers being credited with the outrage. But a few ties were blown up and the damage was repaired in a half hour. This is the third attempt to blow up bridges on the Monongahela road during the last week. All coal over the Baltimore & Ohio for lake points is transferred over the Monongahela road at Lockport.

Coal shipments during the last week have shown a decided increase in this district and this is believed to have been the cause of the dynamiting. Railroad and state police arrived on the scene shortly after the report was heard and are conducting an investigation.

Miss Lulu Bett

It was Lulu, in her dark red suit and her tilted hat.

"You're out early," said he, participating in the village chorus of this bright challenge at this hour.

"Oh, no," said Lulu.

He looked out the window, pretending to be caught by something passing, leaning to see it the better.

"Oh, how'd you get along last night?" he asked, and wondered why he had not thought to say it before.

"All right, thank you," said Lulu.

"Was he about the letter, you know?"

"Yes," she said, "but that didn't matter. You'll be sure," she added, "not to say anything about what was in the letter."

"Why, not tell you tell me I can," said Cornish, "but won't everybody know now?"

"No," Lulu said.

At this he had no more to say, and feeling his speculation in his eyes, dropped them to a piano scarf from which he began flicking invisible specks.

"I came to tell you good-by," Lulu said.

"Good-by!"

"Yes, I'm going off—for a while. My satchel's in the bakery—I had my breakfast in the bakery."

"Say!" Cornish cried warmly, "then everything wasn't all right last night?"

"As right as it can ever be with me," she told him. "Oh, yes, Dwight forgave me."

"Forgave you?"

She smiled, and trembled.

"Look here," said Cornish, "you come here and sit down and tell me about this."

He led her to the folding table, as the only social spot in that vast area of his rented her in the one chair, and for himself brought up a piano stool. But after all she told him nothing. She merely took the comfort of his kindly indignation.

"It came out all right," she said only. "But I won't stay there any more. I can't do that."

"Then what are you going to do?"

"In Milton yesterday," she said, "I saw an advertisement in the hotel—they wanted a chambermaid."

"Oh, Miss Bett!" he cried. At that name she shuddered. "Why," said Cornish, "you must have been coming from Milton yesterday when I saw you. I noticed Miss D. had her bag."

"He stopped, stared. 'You brought her back!' he deduced everything."

"Oh!" said Lulu. "Oh, no—I mean."

"I heard about the eloping agent this morning," he said. "That's just what you did—you brought her back."

"You mustn't tell that! You won't?"

"No, of course not." He mumbled it.

"You tell me this: Do they know? I mean about your going after her?"

"No."

"You never told?"

"They don't know who went."

"That's a funny thing," he blurted out. "For you not to tell her folks—I mean, right off. Before last night."

"You don't know them. Dwight'd never let up on that—sledd joke her about it after a while."

"But it seems—"

"I can't talk about discrediting her. They wouldn't know what to do. There's no sense in telling them. They aren't a mother and father," Lulu said.

Cornish was not accustomed to deal with so much reality. But Lulu's reality he could grasp.

"You're a trump anyhow," he affirmed.

"Oh, no," said Lulu modestly.

Yes, she was. He insisted upon it.

"You've been a jewel in their home all right," said Cornish. "I bet they'll miss you if you go."

"They'll miss my cooking," Lulu said without bitterness.

"They'll miss more than that, I know. I've often watched you there."

"You have?" It was not so much pleasure as passionate gratitude which lighted her eyes.

"You made the whole place," said Cornish.

"You don't mean just the cooking?"

"No, no. I mean—well, that first night when you played croquet. I felt at home when you came out."

That look of hers, rarely seen, which was no less than a look of loveliness, came now to Lulu's face. After a pause she said: "Well, I must be going now. I wanted to say good-by to you—and there's one or two other places."

"I hate to have you go," said Cornish, and tried to add something. "I hate to have you go," was all that he could find to add.

Lulu rose. "Oh, well," was all that she could find.

They shook hands, Lulu laughing a little. Cornish followed her to the door. He had begun to "Look here, I wish—"

"Good-by," when Lulu said "Good-by," and paused, wishing intensely to know what he would have said. But all that he said was: "Good-by. I wish you weren't going."

"So do I," said Lulu, and went, still laughing.

Cornish saw her red dress vanish from his door, flash by his window, her head averted. And there settled upon him a depression out of all proportion to the slow depression of his fate. This was more—it assailed him absorbed him.

He came back to his table, and sat down before his lawbook. But he sat, chin on chest, regarding it. No escape that way.

A step at the door and he sprang up. It was Lulu, coming toward him, her face unsmiling but somehow quite lighted. In her hand was a letter.

"See," she said. "At the office was this."

She thrust in his hand the single sheet. He read:

"... Just wanted you to know you're actually rid of me. I've heard from her, in Brazil. She ran out of money and thought of me, and her lawyer wrote to me. I've never been any good—Dwight would tell you that if his pride would let him tell the truth once in a while. But there ain't anything in my life makes me feel as bad as this."

I suppose you couldn't understand and I don't myself.

Only the sixteen years keeping still made me think she was gone sure. . . . but you were so downright good, that's what was the worst. . . . do you see what I want to say?

Cornish read it all and looked at Lulu. She was grave and in her eyes there was a look of dignity such as he had never seen them wear, incredible dignity.

TO BE CONTINUED.

STORIES OF GREAT INDIANS

By Elmo Scott Watson

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

ROMAN NOSE'S MEDICINE WAR BONNET FAILED HIM

A CHEYENNE war party was attacking a Mormon emigrant train on the Oregon trail. An one of its defenders dropped to the ground mortally wounded. A magnificent proportioned warrior dashed forward to "count coup" (touch the fallen enemy). The hat of the dead man had fallen off, exposing his bald head.

As the red man struck the dead emigrant he shouted to the other Indians: "Your Roman Nose has counted the first coup on the longest-faced white man ever killed."

In many respects Roman Nose (Wohink—Hooked Nose) of the Northern Cheyennes was the ideal type of the Indian warrior. Although he was not a chief, incidents of his great strength, masterful personality and wonderful bearing are legion.

Once in a buffalo hunt his brother-in-law drew his bowstring so powerfully that it broke. The arrow was thrown high into the air as the sinew snapped.

Roman Nose happened to ride up close behind his companion at this instant. Reaching up he caught the shaft, snapped it against his own bowstring and shot the buffalo dead.

A man of more reckless daring in battle never lived. He had a war bonnet, the wearing of which he fondly believed protected him from danger. His faith in it was justified.

On the day of the famous fight with Gen. G. A. Forsyth's 52 scouts at Beecher's Island, Colo., on September 18, 1893, before going into the battle Roman Nose told his companions that he felt sure he would be killed that day. According to the belief the power of the war bonnet would fail if he ever ate anything that was taken from a dish with an iron utensil.

That morning at a feast given by his friends the Sioux, one of the women who served the meal had used a fork to take the food from the frying pan.

When his friends learned of this they urged him to go through the ceremony of purification necessary to restore the power of the war bonnet, but Forsyth's scouts appeared before he could do so.

Therefore with the certain knowledge that he would be killed, Roman Nose assembled his warriors and led them on a charge against Forsyth. His Indians rode over two of the scouts who were concealed in some high grass a short distance from the main command. One of these men died. The Cheyenne fell from his horse, shot through the back and mortally wounded. That evening at sundown Roman Nose died. The strong medicine of his war bonnet had failed him at last.

Might Need a Stadium.

"Mr. Wadleigh has been awarded an honorary degree by a fresh-water college."

"So I heard. He must have been honored in that way before."

"Yes?"

"I understand he's sending out 'feelers' among the trustees to find out how much it's going to cost him."

A Purist.

"Hello, Bert, how's the boy?"

"All right."

"Married?"

"Yes."

"Got any kiddies?"

"Yes, we call them children."

Play Ball.

"The papers are full of the great unrest in the world," remarks the pessimist.

"Cheer up," comforted the optimist. "The ball games are now pushing their stuff off the front pages."

A Summiser.

"Mr. Flub, are you engaged to Beatrice Beautiful, the famous screen star?"

"What does she say about the report, Mr. Flub?"

"Says it is ridiculous."

"Then I guess we are not engaged."

THINK GIRL IS TRUE STIGMATIC

Reported to Have Sign of the Cross on Her Right Side.

CASE CREATES WIDE INTEREST

Some Scientists Hold That Such Marks Are the Result of Natural Causes—First Record of Such a Case Found Its Way into Church History in Thirteenth Century—French Book Catalogues 321 Cases of Stigmata.

The case of Mary Reilly, a postulant at St. Germain's Villa, the Peckskill (N. Y.) convent of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, who is under constant observation to establish whether she is a true stigmatic, has created widespread interest. The seal of silence imposed by Archbishop Hayes upon all who have knowledge of the situation remains unbroken.

A stigmatic is a person who bears on hands, feet, side or brow the marks of the Passion and undergoes corresponding and intense suffering. Some have sufferings without the markings, and these are called invisible stigmata. In the case of Mary Reilly it is said she has a stigma which is only one mark of the Passion. In her case it is reported that the mark is the sign of a cross on her right side and that she suffers considerably.

First Case Recorded.

Her case has created interest in the stigmata, as a feature of ecclesiastical history. It has been a subject of keen discussion among clerics and publicists. Catholic, non-Catholic and heretical, since the first record of such a development found its way into church history. This was in the thirteenth century, when the most notable case was recorded. This was St. Francis of Assisi. In him it took the form of the nail wounds on the hands and feet, the wounds having excrescences of flesh, representing the nails of the Crucifixion. On one side these excrescences were black and like nail heads. On the other side they appeared to be points which had been bent back to grasp the flesh.

Mario de Mori, at the age of twenty (1822), was another instance and, though defective in health, lived in this condition 35 years. Thursday and Friday her stigmata shed very clear blood, becoming dry on other days. Thousands saw this woman, including Wiseman and Lord Shaftesbury, who wrote about her. Louise Latouche of Belgium, at sixteen, became stigmatic, which did not prevent her from supporting her family by sewing. She was born in 1850. Another was St. Catherine of Siena.

Admit Stigmata Existed.

Even free-thinking publicists who have investigated reported cases admit that the stigmata existed as a fact, notably Doctor Dumas, a professor of religious philosophy at the Sorbonne, in an article on the subject in the Revue des Deux Mondes of May 1, 1870.

Free-thinking and Catholic scientists alike have questioned the miraculous nature of these wounds, and in the processes of canonization the church has never accepted them as infallibly miraculous. It is because of the extreme care that the church takes in the investigation of these matters that silence is generally imposed upon those having knowledge of them until the investigation has been completed.

Dr. Umberto, in "La Stigmatisation," published in Paris in 1904, sought to catalogue the known cases of stigmata in church history, and accounted for a total of 321 in which he felt there was every reason to believe in divine action.

Many of the free-thinking scientists have declared that the stigmata induced the condition in themselves by vivid imaginings and emotional excitement, but the church legends have reported that imagination can never create a visible, bleeding wound.

The medical profession naturally insists that such manifestations can be traced to physiological causes.

40,000 MARKS FOR FISH

German Fishers Take New Interest at Landing of Huge Sturgeon.

The fishermen of Altenwerder, Germany, have taken a more lively interest in their occupation since a veteran colleague recently landed a rose sturgeon weighing 145 pounds, on which he realized approximately 40,000 marks.

The fish was found to contain 83 pounds of caviar which sold at 1,000 marks a pound, while its remaining meat went for 45 marks a pound.

Managing a Career.

"You have been in public life a great many years," remarked the admiring constituent.

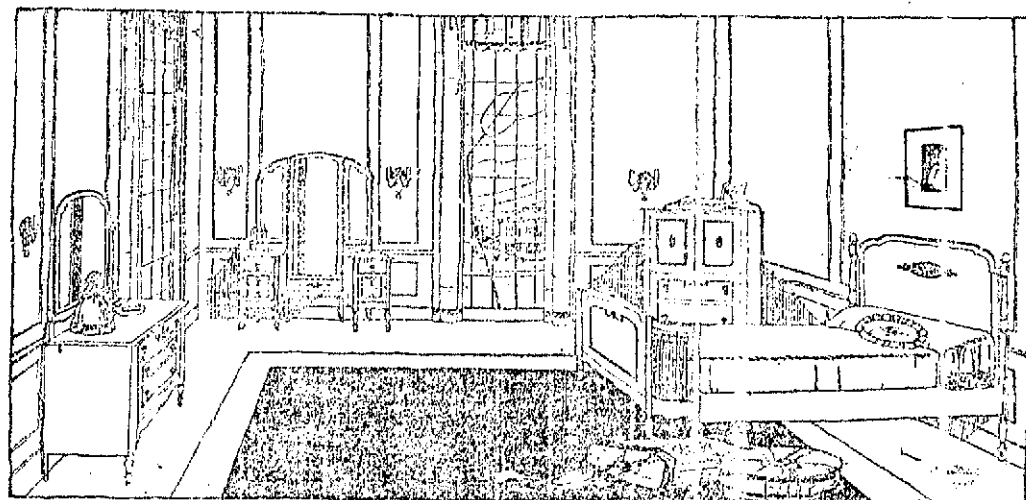

"A great many," assented Senator Sorghum.

"Is this because you were judicious in selecting policies?"

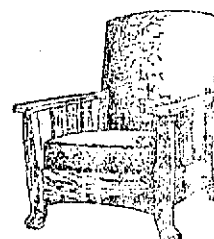

"Partly. But even more to the fact that I was discreet in choosing campaign managers."

Here is a Furniture event that makes Better Homes more easily within the reach of everybody. Viewing the Evidence.

"Some say the teacher of the Plunk with district wears her skirts too short."

"What will be the outcome?"

"Count her a big attendance at the next meeting of the school committee."

Quite Ancient, In Fact

Children—What do you think of the modern jokes?

Teacher—Oh, they are about the same as the old ones.

Children—Yes, and a little older, eh?

Teacher—Stoop, stoop, stoop!

Still Striking

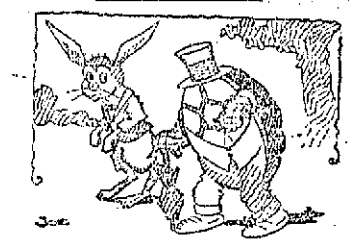

Mother (severely)—Edith! Did I see you at the vendemmia last night?

Daughter—Yes, a mere habit with him, mother. He used to stroke his vestary night.

Decoying.

Mother—You shouldn't have quarreled with your friend in public.

Mary—It was just dreadful. Everybody who didn't know us must have thought we were married.

PRETTY SOFT.

Turtle—Tee, hee, whenever I see one of my creditors, I just pull in my head!

His Idea.

"I like much, Edith," said the man, "and try to please me if I can."

"I should like to see you."

"I'm sorry to please the past."

A Better Way Round.

Jack—Mother, how old are you?

Mother—I don't wish to state, but should any of the neighbors ask you, you may tell them that I was quarried when I was only eighteen.
